

ABSTRACT

A system for delivering power to a processor from a DC-to-DC converter. The system provides contacts, which are attached from underneath and located all around the die, that enable the system to provide three hundred and sixty degree power delivery capabilities to the processor from the power pod.